

The Desert
Sun

TRAVEL

GEO QUIZ

What's the northernmost point in the US?

ANSWER, BE

HAVE A LOCAL STORY IDEA? PLEASE CONTACT US AT LOCALNEWS@DESERTSUN.COM

Going wild in IRVINE

A carefully sculpted, master-planned community, Irvine in Southern California's OC has it all. As home to more than 100 company headquarters, a University of California campus, some of the nation's leading family-friendly destinations nearby—from Disneyland to Knott's Berry Farm—recreation and lifestyle amenities are plentiful. However, Irvine has a "wild" side too.

The Irvine Company nicely created a balance between the calculated lifestyle necessities and the natural space and beauty that also defines the city and its surroundings. For the visitor that translates to a bounty of hiking, biking and nearly endless nature trails in what has been coined "America's safest big city."

Please see STRONG, BE

Kathy Strong

GOING MY WAY

Irvine's city planners allowed for ample open space, such as Bommer Canyon in southern Irvine—a preserve with hiking and biking trails.

COURTESY IRVINE COMPANY