When the weather gets chilly, restaurants and bars all over Orange County are warming up with spicy cocktails on their menus. A little heat in a drink never hurt anyone, right? Some of these restaurants take spicy cocktails to the extreme. Scorching ghost peppers make an appearance at Three Seventy Common, hitting the Scoville Heat Scale at nearly a million units. But if you're looking for something more tame, Oak Grill and La Vida are mixing up fruity margaritas to tone down the jalapeños hiding inside. Some of these drinks come with disclaimers, so know your tolerance and take a trip on the wild spice side.

► The spring green hue of the Icy Hot stands out amongst the bright reds and oranges that make up the decor of the Red Bar. Don't be fooled by the cooling ingredients in this spicy cocktail, cool cucumbers can't mask the heat of the fresh jalapeños. Irvine's endless summer lets the Red Bar keep this instant hit on the menu year-round. However, the Red Bar really focuses on only using fresh ingredients that are in season, and because of that the menu is continually changing, making the ever present Icy Hot truly unique. The mixologists partner with the hotel's Chef Jason Montelibano to create complimentary farm fresh menus. Visit during happy hour to get half off the Icy Hot and other handcrafted, seasonally focused drinks at the lounge.
